

Dear Doctor:

Your patient is exploring the option of genetic testing. At Invitae, we believe in medically responsible testing that is simple and affordable. We also believe in the value of supporting both physicians and patients throughout the genetic testing process.

Here are some things about genetic testing through Invitae that we think you should know:

- 1 Your patient's medical management may be altered by genetic test results
 - Published guidelines recommend genetic testing for patients meeting certain criteria (visit www.invitae.com/resource-hub for more information)
- 2 Genetic test results can impact the risk of disease in family members
 - This may allow for prevention or early detection of genetic disease
- 3 Many insurance companies cover the cost of genetic testing for appropriate patients
 - In addition to insurance, payment options include Medicare and a patient assistance program for patients who meet certain financial and clinical criteria
- 4 Genetic testing is now available for many types of health conditions
 - This includes hereditary cancer, cardiology, neurology, and pediatric and rare diseases
- 5 Invitae has genetic counselors on staff to assist physicians and patients
 - Invitae offers consultation for physicians as well as genetic counseling services for patients (learn more at www.invitae.com/clinical-support-services)

By visiting our website, you and your patient can learn valuable information about our testing and services including:

- What are appropriate clinical indications for genetic testing?
- How can genetic testing be used to guide medical management?
- What type of family history information is most important to collect?

We are committed to ensuring that you have the right tools to provide your patients with the answers they need.
